

There's a story about the person who wished his computer were as easy to use as his telephone. That wish has come true since I no longer know how to use my telephone.